As everybody knows, it's always a terrible feeling to be the last one chosen for the kickball team or not to be asked at all or to know people are avoiding asking you because of something. And you know it doesn't hurt to ask a person if they want to participate. And I think the, you know, I am always excited when people ask me if I want to do something and even if it's something that I know that they know that I really would never want to do or really thought I could do, it's always really nice to be asked.
