I think It's really important for kids to know how kids with disabilities get affected by the way they talk to them and just like something like a simple "Hi" in the hallways can completely change a mood and when you sit there and you pick on them, it doesn't get you anywhere, doesn't make you look cool, it doesn't do anything. I mean maybe your friends would laugh and maybe you will be like a comedian but it doesn't make you look any better than anybody else because it's not, it could ruin somebody's day or somebody's mood for that day, so it's like it's not worth it to ruin someone else's mood just to look cool for what, 10 minutes?
