If somebody thinks of you first for your blindness and doesn't think of you as who you are as a total person or even makes any effort to try to get to know who you are but just a lot of blind people are visibly blind because they have a guide dog or in my case I use a white cane when I am outdoors moving around. Some people you know their eyes are obviously not working or as I said when I was in middle school I had their dorky sunglasses on, so people knew something was wrong with my eyes. People would say anything to you about it but you felt you were stared at and so forth. So that is the main thing if people could be better about that then you wouldn't even be using any of those terms for you because you would just be Michael or you would just be known for what you do and not so much for what you can't do.
